SOCIAL – SEX ATTITUDES IN ADOLESCENCE

“Teenagers differ greatly in the development of their social-sex attitudes. They are influenced by many factors such as parental attitudes, and guidance, behavior and attitudes of friends, and the customs of the community in which they live

We SEE the class at South Valley Academy. CREDITS run as we HEAR and SEE:

Female: This is the game of Concentration. No repeats or hesitation. Topic is...

Female: Um, birth control?

Female: Condoms.

Female: Female condom

Female: Pill

Female: Diaphragm

Female: NuvaRing

Female: Abstinence.

1952 movie

Mary: Where is the baby, mommy? Why won't it come?

Mom: It's right here, dear.

Teacher: Okay, so one of the things we've been talking about here is teen pregnancy and how high it is in New Mexico. Why do you guys think teen pregnancy is so high? Cindy.

Cindy: Because parents don't talk to their children about sex as much.

Teacher: And why do you think teen pregnancy is so high in New Mexico?

Female: The lack of education of contraception in teens.

Teacher: Definitely. Those are two really big reasons. So, what we're going to do today so that we can spread more knowledge to our community is how would we like our parents to talk to us about sex, as young people, what would be the best way that your parent could talk to you about sex?

OK Cindy.

This is your dad here.

This is your dad.

Can I talk to you for a minute.

We're gonna have the talk.

LAUGHTER

I just wanted to talk.

You're at the age where.

I just want to know if you know anything about sex.

Talk about sex with you.

See if you have the right information.

Make sure you're making the right decisions.

I don't want you to end up pregnant or to get any STI.

So please come to me before you talk to anyone else.

I just need you to be careful with the decisions that you're making.

You know that if you want any birth control or anything, you can ask me and we can take you to the doctors.

got nothing in her head but boys, boys, boys.

Mom: I'll have to talk more to her about how to have fun with them without being silly.

Dad: Well, I guess she'll just have to learn by experience how to look after herself

PREGNANT SCRIPT FINAL

We did talk about birth control and all that stuff, she said that she was on the birth control and everything. Even if she was on the pill, it messed up, so we still ended up with a kid.

TANIA

We were using birth control, we were using condoms, but I guess something went wrong and I was 14

NATURAL SOUND:

Girl: How are you today?

Dr. Espy: I'm great how are you doing?

Girl: I'm doing good.

DR. EVE ESPY

There's a much higher percentage of teens who use contraception when they have sex. So about 90% of teens who have sex are using a contraceptive.

But most of those teens are using short acting methods that are not very effective, like condoms and birth control pills. Condoms are great at preventing sexually transmitted infections but they're not great at preventing pregnancy. A really high typical failure rate at a year about 18%. So about 18% of teens who use condoms will become pregnant, uh, in a year, using just that method. For birth control pills it's about 8%, so eight of that 100 women will get pregnant.

Girl: So my boyfriend and I are thinking about becoming sexually active. But we're definitely not ready to have a kid. So what should we do to prevent that?

DR. ESPY

So the answer is really the long-acting, reversible methods. With IUDs and implants it's 1% or less. So 1 out of 100 women will become pregnant using those methods. And the implant is actually the most effective reversible method. What's so great about them is it's a forgettable method. There's nothing that teen has to do. It's an in-office procedure. It's a small bit of anesthetic in the arm that's delivered by a needle. It's literally a second and then that implant is placed into the upper arm. The girl doesn't even feel it. That's literally a less than one minute procedure.

The IUD is a little bit more of a project. It's a pelvic exam. Reversible means that if that teenager wants to get pregnant, or if she just doesn't like the method, it can be removed. Um, the removal is also an in-office procedure. But if that teen wants to get pregnant, let's say two years later and that method actually lasts for five years, she can become pregnant as soon as the, the implant or the IUD is removed.

MUSIC

ALFADIVA

Let's go down the slide. One. Two. Three.

DR. BRENDA PAREDA

New Mexico is a predominantly, you know, ethnic state with a large percentage of Latino population, and when we look at that, we have to look at the cultural background that that infuses into the problem of teen pregnancy.

DAVID BRYANT

Um, it's definitely a taboo topic for a lot of our families. It's not something that a lot of parents are comfortable speaking about. So in terms of having students feel very comfortable approaching their parents with the questions, um, it could be a big issue,

DR BRENDA PAREDA

Embedded within the whole problem are, are these little health disparities and these inequities. You're going to look at lack of education, lack of access to health care, which are really the drivers in teen pregnancy.

DAVID BRYANT

Access is definitely an issue. I know that most of the parents are... are not very open in terms of providing access to, to kids for obvious reasons and I think kids are obviously not very, um, prone to asking their parents to take them to a clinic.

DR BRENDA PAREDA

Historically, we've had our families really young. Historically we've had communities helping to rear the children, but we're not doing that anymore. We can't provide the same level of, uh, support to the young woman.

DAVID BRYANT

Growing up Mexican American myself I think there's definitely a dichotomy between what is presented and what is expected. I would say that in the Mexican culture for sure there's a lot of machismo to this day within a lot of the families that, you know, kind of percolates.

DR. BRENDA PAREDA

And they don't want to be putting themselves out there as sexual beings when they can't even do that in their own family. And so imagine that.

DR EVE ESPY

Well, think about it. Would you want to talk to your mother about sex? It is interesting that we think that parents should be so involved in sex education. When you think about it, very few, uh, children want to talk to their parents about sex.

DR BRENDA PAREDA

And so the best, easiest solution is to do this wherever they are in school. And so, it's a no-brainer.

Student: You have to trust each other.

Teacher: Ok, Sara.

Sara: Mutual respect.

Teacher: What does it look like?

Female: Having healthy boundaries.

Teacher: Good. Healthy boundaries. Allie?

Female: Um, you have to have trust in each other.

Teacher: Okay, trust. Good. What does a healthy relationship look like to you?

Female: Being able to communicate.

Teacher: Being able to communicate with each other. Good

1953 Movie

Mary: Jack, please don't do that.

Jack: Don't act like an iceberg all your life. Look, we love each other, don't we?

Mary: Take me home!

Narrator: Now Mary began to realize what her mother had meant all these years. Through her own experience Mary was developing a sound idea of what love should mean in her life. It was not what Jack offered.

JESSICA

I was honor student, um, very active in my school. Um, I was with my boyfriend for about a year. We never really talked about like, what could happen, the consequences. Um, so, I become pregnant at the age of 14.

CUT TO DONA ANA COUNTY THINK TANK

JAIMIE MICHAEL

Teen pregnancy and the prevention of teen pregnancy and teen births is definitely a priority for our county. So I'm very pleased that we're able to have this event here today, and I'm grateful that all of you are here to be the voice of Doña Ana County, to talk about the issue.

FEMALE How should you talk to your partner about these things?

FEMALE: Snapchat. It's embarrassing. So maybe texting or Snap Chat..where I don't have to look at them in the face.

MALE:

I think what's coming through the media to kids, like the Cialis ads. We have a friend who had a fourth grade boy. He came running out in the kitchen and said to his mother, "What's this thing with this four hour one?"

FEMALE:

I think that's really important for kids to talk about commitment and talk about like what do I want from you and what do you need from me?

FEMALE:

Part of the conversation has to be consequences.

DR EARL NISSEN

We started off by deciding that the abstinence-only curriculum in the Las Cruces schools was not appropriate. Because this county in 2005 was number one in the state of New Mexico, making it number one in the US of A, in the number of teen pregnancy births. A year later, our school-based health centers were active, and we got the board to adopt a policy that they could do family planning out of the school-based health centers in the high schools. And those two factors, I think are the biggest things that have contributed to a 50% decline in the teen birth rate since 2007. The 15- to 17-year-olds.

Great. Relationships are so important. And so, I'm guessing that you really like him.

Jasmine: Well, I like him a lot, and I'm confused as to what the next step will be. But I can see myself having a family with him someday.

Dr. Bullock: Ah, how wonderful.

Dr. CARLETTA BULLOCK

The state of New Mexico has laws that allow for confidential services for a list of services that include family planning services. For all ages. We're able to provide what I consider the four Cs in terms of youth-friendly services. Confidentiality: absolutely strict. Comfort: we're meeting the student in his or her comfort zone. Convenient: we're located on campus so there's no access problems. And cost: we're able to provide free services. These are at the school-based health clinics that are providing family planning services as an outreach program from the New Mexico Department of Health.

NATURAL SOUND

Dr. Bullock: Someone like you who really wants to concentrate on your schooling.

DR. BULLOCK:

NATURAL SOUND

Dr. Bullock:

We've talked about confidentiality, and whatever you say here stays here. I've encouraged you to involve your parents in your decision-making, but I leave it to you. Now, I want to go over all the specific methods, ...

DAVID BRYANT

I think it's about time that we spread the message that it's okay to talk to your kids, it's okay to have conversations that make you feel uncomfortable because unless we do have those conversations then nothing's gonna change.

GRAPHIC: PLAIN TALK PROGRAM

ALEJANDRA OCHOA

The Plain Talk program is a program aimed at helping parents start the conversation with teenagers. We do what are called home health parties. We go over anatomy, physiology, we go over birth control, we go over SDI's and how to actually talk to the teens.

Why it never dawned on us that this was a possibility that I could get pregnant, I don't know why. So for the most part, no, we didn't use safe sex.

Financially it's been tough. Babies cost a lot. Especially girls, everything from diapers to shoes, especially with formula.

So I used to use a Gerber soothe and this was just because she was super colicky and fussy. So the doctor recommended this one and it actually helped a lot. And um, I mean the price for this is what, $18.99. $17.99 a can. And WIC would only give me nine and she would go through like 13, 14 a month. So I would have to buy the extra ones.

I was a sophomore when I got pregnant. And I actually dropped out for about two or three months when I got pregnant because I was so embarrassed, basically. I decided to try to get my GED, but I went to the superintendent I believe that had to sign off on it, and she said, no way. She's like, you can do it. This is not a reason for you to drop out. ## 1953 MOVIE

NARRATOR: Mary and her gang were going through the hangout stage. They liked to be in a crowd. When you're not sure how to act or what to say, you can hide your confusion in the general hubbub. A girl has to look as though she knew her way around, be more sophisticated than she really is.

CASSI

It would have helped. Definitely if my peers would have talked to me, because, um, well, I was hanging out with the wrong crowd, too. So that had a huge impact and they were all having unprotected sex and so that was just like the norm, you know. And I was like, no one's getting pregnant, so, you know. But soon after I got pregnant like two of my other friends got pregnant.

GRAPHIC: SOUTH VALLEY PEERS IN ACTION

Student: So basically yes, you could get pregnant the first time you have sex because even though it's the first time, sex is still sex. It doesn't matter if it's the second time or the first time, you could still get pregnant.

KRISTEN KOFFMAN

South Valley Peers in Action is an afterschool program. Uh, we meet once a week for an hour and we do activities. We talk about different ways to deliver curriculum, um, about sex ed to younger kids and then also their peers in high school.

Student: Anyone else?

KRISTEN KOFFMAN

We have a sponsor from Planned Parenthood who comes every week and they're the expert on the sex ed portion of it and like the material the kids teach, uh, but the kids themselves develop the games and the activities that they do with these students in the classroom.

LALITA RUSS Our educators go into schools and work with groups of young people who self-select to be part of the peer education program. They train them to be educators and to be teachers themselves.

Student: Okay, so there are different kinds of birth control methods you could do, um, to prevent pregnancy and this is one control method...

KRISTEN KOFFMAN

NARRATOR: Bob was growing up too. He knew about the reproductive organs and nocturnal emissions. He knew that the healthiest life for him was to have plenty of exercise and fresh air. Until one day when Bob was 16. It became apparent that his interest in girls was getting to be more than casual.

DAVID BRYANT

It's important for young men to hear from their fathers, from their grandfathers, from their uncles, their cousins, their older brothers that what defines you isn't necessarily having sex.

BARRY McINTOSH

Adults:

I've heard a lot of parents of young men that talk about the car or the vehicle being a great place for a conversation because there's no direct eye contact with their parent.

Ask them, you know, what are your friends doing or what do your friends think about this. I know my daughters have opened up a little bit more because it's not about them.

I think it has to be an ongoing conversation.

We have got to overcome our awkwardness because our kids are suffering. I think the most important thing is that parents should be honest with their kids.

Here's all the condoms, here you go guys, I'd rather buy all the condoms than diapers.

You know sex is on TV all the time. So I think that parents should kind of make the best of that and turn that into a conversation starter, using the characters and faces that they already know from the television.

I knew that I wasn't going to stop her, but I wanted her protected, and I wanted her well informed, most of all.

I was never taught, like my parents didn't talk to me about it, you know. I learned on the street like everybody else.
